

Sarah Blodgett ~ Photographer

Sarah Blodgett is a wild life photographer from upstate New York. Her primary focus is on birds but she also photographs land and seascapes, still life and florals and an occasional portrait, a left over habit from year twenty plus years as a portrait photographer.

Sarah offers a slide show presentation of her beautiful images accompanied by a talks varied in subject matter from her evolution as a commercial photographer into a wild life photography, birds of specific areas such as New York state, Southern California, and Florida, to subjects such as, how to photograph the elusive Green Heron. Greatly concerned with conversation, Sarah puts an emphasis on the ethics of wildlife photography.

As well as speaking engagements, Sarah offers one on one or group instruction for photographers.

Please feel free to contact Sarah to inquire about a speaking engagement in your area.

Kind Words:

“Sarah Blodgett’s program not only shows you the beauty and majesty of nature but brings a smile to your face by pointing out the more whimsical side of life.”

Linda Slobodnyak, Chemung Valley Audubon Society

“Sarah's presentation for the Salt Point Speaker Series was engaging and entertaining. We appreciated hearing the interesting stories behind many of her beautiful photographs.”

Robert Rieger ~ President-Friends of Salt Point Natural Area

“Sarah’s creativity doesn’t stop with her wildlife photography. She is a gifted speaker, entrancing audiences with the visuals and then explaining them in a way that helps everyone feel the wonder and beauty she captures with her lens. When she presented a slide show at a fundraiser we held for a lake conservation group, the age range in our 50-person audience was 21 to 91. She captivated everyone with her story telling, and we all learned something new about the natural history of our region, and the patience and skill it takes for photo’s like Sarah’s.”

David Walter Wolfe and Lauren Chambliss, Cornell University
